

Social Emotional Engagement Knowledge and Skills (SEE-KS)

with Jen Townsend

May 3, 2019 | Richmond, BC

A Universal Design model for Classroom Intervention

Grounded in research on the neuroscience of social competence, the SEE-KS framework, developed by Emily Rubin and Jennifer Townsend, helps us understand neuropsychological differences and design and implement instructional strategies. Guided by universal design for learning, Jen will describe a teacher-friendly approach to support the social-emotional and communication development of all students in the classroom. Participants will leave the session with an action plan to implement in their own setting.

Morning Topics:

- Research on the neuroscience of social competence
- Scope and sequence of skill development
- SEE-KS framework to identifying social-emotional learning targets and associated UDL interventions
- Vignettes, demonstrating how to foster engagement, provide information in multiple ways, and offer a variety of opportunities for expression

Afternoon Topics:

- Development of social-emotional goals and interventions across school environments
- Appreciative inquiry approach to encourage implementation
- Implementation plan development
